Reviewers

The Blind Review Process

The contents of Contemporary Nephrology Nursing underwent a “blind” review process by qualified individuals. One or more chapters were sent to chosen people for critical evaluation. The reviewer did not know the author’s identity at the time of the review. The work could be accepted (1) as originally submitted without revisions, (2) with minor revisions, or (3) with major revisions. The reviewers offered tremendous insight and suggestions; some even submitted additional references or information they thought might be useful. The results of the reviews were then sent back to the authors to incorporate the suggestions and make revisions. The reviewers will discover who the authors are now that the book is published. However, while there is this published list of reviewers, no one will know who reviewed which chapter of this book. That part of the process remains blind. Because of the efforts of individuals listed below, value was added to the 4th edition. Their hard work is greatly appreciated.
